

What are the rules for referencing HDMI[®] version numbers?

Effective January 1, 2012, when marketing an HDMI Product, any references to HDMI version numbers is prohibited.

HDMI Cables

Using HDMI version numbers in the labeling, packaging, or promotion of any cable product is prohibited.

This includes releases of the HDMI Specification (for example, HDMI 1.4, 1.3, etc.), interim version numbers (for example, HDMI 1.4a, 1.3a, etc.) and CTS (Compliance Test Specification) version numbers (for example, 1.4a, 1.3c, etc.).

Cable products that refer to version numbers are considered non-compliant and subject to trademark enforcement actions.

Compliant Use—Packaging for HDMI Cables

Compliant use of cable name logos

Compliant labeling on cable connector

Compliant use of HDMI Logo

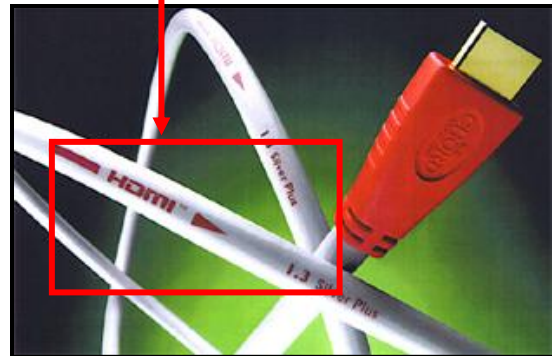

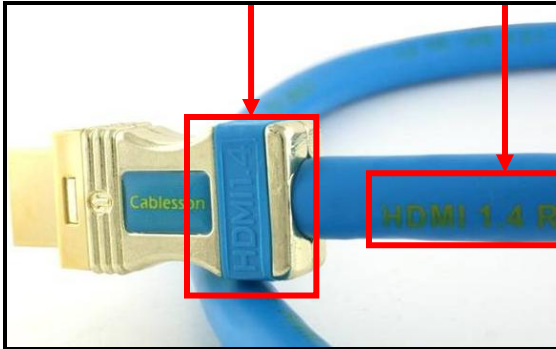

Compliant use of translations in text

Note that both the cable and packaging do not reference HDMI version numbers.

UNAUTHORIZED USE—HDMI VERSION NUMBERS WITH CABLE PRODUCTS

Even if product features are listed, using HDMI version numbers in the labeling, packaging, or promotion of any cable product is prohibited.

HDMI v1.4 Cable,
Support 3D,
4K x 2K,
Audio Return,
Ethernet.
From $2.14

LEARN MORE ►

The contents of this document are presented for informational purposes only and should not be construed as legal advice or an interpretation of any contract. If the contents of this document conflict in any way with the terms of the HDMI Adopter Agreement, the Adopter Agreement shall be the controlling document.

Please consult Attachment A to the HDMI Adopter Agreement, "Adopted Trademark and Logo Usage Guidelines," for more information.

Non-cable products

Effective January 1, 2012, you may not use version numbers when marketing your HDMI Products.

Compliant Use for Non-cable Products

No version numbers are used.

UNAUTHORIZED USE OF HDMI VERSION NUMBERS

Effective January 1, 2012, even if your product lists a supported feature, you may not reference HDMI version numbers.

Non-compliant and subject to trademark enforcement programs.